The Kitchen

The first assumed communal space, the kitchen was design to serve not only the purpose of collective cooking but, more importantly, to bring tap-water close to the houses. At the same time defines itself as a place to allow the dispute of practices, where dissensus is an important aggregator of the community. With three different spaces in an U shape form at the same that opens to the outside allows a more closed sector where collective meeting take place. It's use is define and constantly negotiated according to the users of the moment, being adults or children's or, even, both simultaneously. Is also from its inauguration the central point of the neighbourhood.
