

The renovation of pavements, the regularization of ramp and stair surfaces, and the placement of new handrails allowed a safer and easier circulation within the neighbourhood. Also, the painting of all walls, changed its image radically.

It is safe to say that this intervention reinforced the sense of belonging and pride in the dwellers, and intensified their concern with the maintenance of public space and their homes. Many of the residents decided to make improvement works on their homes' façades as a result of this intervention.

The work placement set an important and necessary precedent, valuing the experience and knowledge of local actors through their hiring for actions in the neighbourhood and for the neighbourhood.
