The space was opened on September 23, 2017 with The Manifest festival, which had no analogues in the city. More than 200 people came to various activities (flea market, food court, electronic concert, project discussion, sports), which opened the territory in a completely different light.

There were many concerns about the integrity of the construction in a place where people are pulling apart the buildings and there were even attempts to steal several boards from the public space. Nevertheless, residents are looking after the place and restoring it. The experiment with “fragility” continues. A discussion began about the safety of the route as a whole and some emergency places in particular, the dialogue is launched.
