

An urban square named Sløjfen absorbs rainwater from the roads alongside the park and receive the water that is not directed into the park. Rainwater is collected, cleaned in the underground pipes and led in a grand movement based on Fibonacci's spiral geometry

Cleaned rainwater is pumped up in Sløjfen

The square is a combined storm water and activity area

Water is a centrum that creates new cultural life and different activities in the square