

Concept

Redesign of the surface and urban furniture of the Sonogno main square.

The town square of Sonogno was a poorly defined space, the result of the successive demolition of three buildings and a modification in the road layout, with a badly maintained tarmac surface.

The square surface has been repaved with natural stone and the public area adjacent to the ancient Museum building has been reorganised by extending the plinth on which it stands towards the square. The plinth extends to meet the new "Museo delle antiche Gesta" (Museum of Ancient Gestures) and thus creates a series of steps that link the square and the space between the two buildings of the museum complex. The project also includes the placing of a number of granite blocks (seats) in a "brushed" finish around the rest of the square's perimeter.
