The ruins of the ancient Civic Tower of Pavia enclose a pool of water on whose surface are suspended architectural fragments of the original belfry which, at a height of over 70 mt, once crowned the tower and can now be recomposed in the imagination of the observer.

THE SHAPE OF WATER
highlighting of the ruins of the Civic Tower in Pavia (2016)