The beauty of the Castle District lies in its character created by the continuously changing cross sections and constantly varying spatial relations along almost half a kilometer length, and by the feature that all this belongs to Castle Boulevard, to its dynamism and generosity. This duality is the greatest value that we wanted to strengthen in our plan.

The key concept was that when standing at any point of the Castle District one should know and feel that he/she is in this very part of the area. However, moderate approach was also required since the facades of the historic development along the inner and outer curves are determinative urban design elements, thus competing with them for dominance is unnecessary.
