In place of the old, medieval ramparts (fortification) first Belgrade urbanist Emilian Josimovic planned the street with a double tree line in 1867 and he called it "venac" (a wreath of flowers).

Later, trees were removed in favor of cars and parking.

After 150 years, this project rehabilitates 6500 sqm as a promenade and a part of Belgrade central pedestrian zone. New 40 trees in double lines revitalise the idea of a "wreath".
