

La Marina. Evolving Waterfront

La Marina de Valencia is a product of time. Since its foundation in the 13th century, it has experienced a number of profound transformations and structural metamorphoses which inevitably left their mark on the current landscape. This is why we cannot afford to examine the Marina in vacuum as an end-to-end project. Quite the contrary, it is a fast-evolving space, intricately tied to its past but relentlessly looking at the future.

In today's post-crisis scenario, a fundamental shift of perspective is underway. La Marina is no longer understood as an introverted space that exists in isolation. Instead, we see it as an integral part of the city, which is constantly interacting with its urban environment.
