Co-creating The Brick Bench
The Brick Bench was designed and built by the residents of the social housing area. But before the bench itself residents created their own bricks in a public workshop to honour the local history of the brick industry. From the ideas of the residents a professional drawing was made and local businesses and craftsmen were involved in order to bridge the gap between the town and the social housing area.

Pupils from The Charlotte School show the Mayor how to make bricks and help him engrave his name in the clay.

The bench is being built by masons assisted by the residents. Here the bricks with the names engraved are being placed as part of the bench.
