

The 3D illustration before the building process started made from the original cardboard model.

New starting point

The Charlotte Bench was created from a series of workshops with residents of Charlott kvarteret, local children and citizens from Hedehusene who were told the story of Charlotte and her husband, an entrepreneur in the brick industry. The couple were also part of the cultural elite of Copenhagen adding a bit of stardust to the story and giving residents, many of whom are foreign, a sense of being part of the larger community of the whole of Denmark.

Pupils from the local Charlotte School were part of the workshops behind The Charlotte Bench.

The original card board model of The Charlotte Bench was created by a group of pupils in one of the urban co-creation workshops.

Pupils working on ideas for The Charlotte Bench based on the local history.