

Assessment

The new plaza Joan Miró meets the goals and needs of the community as they occurred on the preliminary phase and developed collaboratively along the process. The following contributions and impacts in various levels have been identified:

City council adopted the interconnection and transversality between different administrative departments. Through that procedure, technicians and politics learnt a new savoir-faire philosophy based on planning, management and collaborative design of public space.

As for the community, the process highlighted their key role on the project and their importance as city agents. What is more, the methodology was assessed positively and through that new relations and collaborations between various entities and citizens occurred.

Concerning to physical environment, the regeneration of the square has improved the social and physical space since it inspires new activities, turning it into a dynamic place of coexistence.
