A METROPOLITAN MEETING POINT
The built project has accomplished its originating goals in term of design and architecture. Today, Place de la République has become a metropolitan meeting point, an attractive center. Since from its opening day, the public space has been widely engaged by people, allowing both predicted and unexpected uses to emerge, coherently with the project's aim to conceive an innovative space opened to multiple practices. The most important challenge was to reunify and harmonise the attributes of a city with those of a local neighbourhood. (...)
