URBAN BEE HIVE PARK
A project by Atelier del Paesaggio

The project, started in 2014, is a social and green design activity for the safeguard of bees and urban biodiversity. The first ‘Art Apiary’ in the world has been designed to rescue an abandoned area of 2,000 square meters near Central Train Station in Milano (Italy). More than 50 creatives from all over the world have been invited to rethink the house for bees, to valorise eco-friendly practices in the urban contest. The program is carried out together with local citizens, students, families. Workshops, guided tours, public debates, educational activities, honey tasting, etc., are designed as social experiences. Urban Hive is an important reflection on the relation between human being and environment, art and ecology.
