In 2007 Szczecin adopted a long-term strategy titled the “Floating Garden 2050” which aimed at drawing attention to the water. One of the assumptions included creating a “port business card” of the city. The design is an attempt to create a true hallmark of the city, a place which could become a healing ‘injection’ which could help restore the vitality of the city. This area is one of the most interesting parts of the city whose potential has not been used so far.

< View of the site before start of the project.