

There were four stages of the project with the involvement of citizens on every stage: project presentation and discussion with the citizens; open design workshop; construction of the parklets by the community; discussion and presentation of the results. We organized an open design workshop and construction process where more than 20 volunteers took part.

After 5 days of work two parklets were created. Each of them has approximately 11 sq.m (1.9x5.8m and 0.6m height). The floor consists of twelve metal frames fixed together and covered with the panels made of wooden planks. Over it the bicycle parking facilities were set up and the construction of the wooden triangle pieces formed the benches.