According to the urban regulations, the volume of the existing buildings could not be significantly modified. One of the buildings was destroyed and the existing structure of the other building was refurbished. Elevations were entirely remodeled. An additional volumes, called three “little mountains” were added outside the buildings.