This platform will surround social housing and translate to the pavement the order and rhythm of the neighborhood that come from the modulation of the buildings, giving the whole place the same rigor and meaning.

To carry out the intervention, it was necessary the demolition of the existing sidewalks on the social housing side, as well as the demolition of 2 meters width band of road surface, in aim to create a 2.50 meters width horizontal plane without steps paved with colorful concrete slabs around social housing and a perimeter 3,30 meters width asphalted car lane. At the same time, a new sanitation network to channel the rainwater was done underneath these streets and the original outdoor wall mounted luminaires were restored to their place over each entrance door.

These new meeting spaces are provided with several benches that respond to the module that comes from housing to the pavement in order to encourage pedestrians to appropriate the streets, and some trees in specific places in aim to generate a healthy environment.

Finally, the name plates were changed so that to remove Falangist symbols from them.
