The condition of the riverbank before the revitalization - the river Ohře is separated from the town. The lack of paths leading along of to the river as well as the high embankment wall does not allow the public to access the river at any point.

After the realization the river invites to spend time at its banks, offering new ways to enjoy the river to its full potential, including new paths for pedestrians and cyclists along the river, boat rental, and a bistro with seating inside of the overhang.
