The district around the ancient windmills was subject of a comprehensive urban renewal project. “The Alaçati Windmills Park and Entrance Square and Promenade Project” prepared by UrbAr Office for Urbanization and Architecture in 2008 foresaw the restoration of the ancient windmills and designated the space around them as a cultural landscape to be opened to public use.

The aim of the intervention was to restore the ancient windmills and to open the space around the windmills to public use. A decision that took into consideration the area is a high place - a natural setting to look on the town.